

rules, you are zapped for 10 years. Now that is going to make them stop and think. You are going to have less violations of the rule of the law because then they know, are they responsible people or aren't they? I think you better believe and they will believe they hadn't better do it. Or, of course, they can always call a cab, but then they could be late and it would cost them some money. But under the bill the cabbie could tip a few because he is exempt and if the cabbie is tipping a few, he might tip a few if he is a real good drinker. But we won't go into that now, we will go into that a little later. So what I am asking for is that if we are going to grant this special legislation, this special privilege, let's say, okay, if you violate it and if you are caught, you lose it for 10 years. Then this will make it worthwhile for the law enforcement agencies to enforce it and to look for these people because they know it will be worthwhile. As it is now, what is six months? Doesn't mean a thing. Senator Hoagland wanted to reduce the life revocation to 10 years. I went along with him. Ten years is a long time. So being that Senator Hoagland is in agreement to reducing it from life to 10 years, I really don't think he should fuss with this, saying that if you violate this special bill that I got passed for you, it is 10 years that you lose your license. So it is not such a bad amendment. There should be some kind of punishment and I think this will help. I really do. I offer it in all sincerity and I ask you to support the amendment. Thank you, Madam President.

SENATOR MARSH: There are no other lights on this so, Senator Haberman, would you close? Senator Haberman. Senator Haberman. Senator Haberman, there are no other lights on this, are you ready to vote?

SENATOR HABERMAN: Oh, I can talk for another five minutes?

SENATOR MARSH: You can, sir, if you choose to do so.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Can I talk to you or do I have to debate the bill?

SENATOR MARSH: You can talk to me on the side, you don't have to talk right in public.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Madam President, I will say that in closing, same thing as in the opening, I ask you to support
